Pangender

47 VIEW SOURCE

Pangender is a form of multigender in which someone experiences all genders. It is a non-binary gender which refers to a vast and diverse amount of genders in the same individual that can extend infinitely. A pangender person can experience these genders at the same time or they may be fluid between them. The intensity of their gender(s) may fluctuate.

The pangender flag.

Since the term pangender is very expansive and unspecific it could mean several different things depending on the individual, including:

- A person who has a large number of genders (too many to count).
- A person who is all known genders.
- A person whose gender experience goes beyond the known genders.
- A person who has infinitely many genders.
- A person who has one all-encompassing gender.

A pangender flag

An alternate flag.

When referring to all genders this only includes genders in one's own culture and life experience. One cannot identify as ethnic genders outside their own culture, as those gender require a connection to and knowledge of that culture, and it's impossible for one to spend their life in all cultures.

Sometimes people use pangender to refer to not caring about gender/how other people view them.

The pangender symbol

Flags and Symbols

The pangender flag was designed by the Tumblr user Cari-Rez-Lobo on January 28th, 2015. Two flags were created at this time, colors holding the same meanings.[1] The colors are very bright so that they represent the multiplicity of genders (because white light is a combination of all colors). Yellow represents all the genders that are not related to female and male (abinary). Light red represents the transition to the genders which are related to female and male. Light pink represents the combination of female and male. White represents the blend of all genders.[2]

An alternate pride flag was submitted by u/helpme0519 in r/QueerVexillology on Reddit. The colors share similar meanings to the pansexual flag: Blue and pink represent male and female binary genders, Yellow represents genders that fall outside of the binary, White represents for a combination of all genders.[3] this flag was coined on September 28th, 2020

The pangender symbol was created by an unknown person. The symbol appears to be a combination of the androgyne symbol (which itself is a combination of the female and male symbols), showing that one is all female/feminine genders, all male/masculine genders, and all genders that are a combination of these; the non-binary symbol, showing that one is all non-binary genders, particularly abinary genders; and the agender symbol, showing that genderlessness can be included as well.

Is there a version of this that's for sexuality? NO, I DON'T MEAN PANSEXUAL.
I mean that I am pangender but I also feel like I am every sexuality cause of me being pangender.

I found this a couple of days ago and it just made sense. But... Is it pangender if I identify as an infinite number of genders, but none of them are feminine?

TheNelsonSystem • 7/23/2021

You could use the term pangender! or for a more specific term there's pangenderfae

Can you be pangender and genderflux like you always feel like all genders but sometimes some are more intense than others? For example 1 day you feel all genders equally then the next you feel more like a boy but still feel the other genders. Also, are xenogenders included?

FoxBanana • 6/23/2021

For your first question, I believe so. You might want to check out pangenderflux. For your second question, as far as I know, yes.

Is it ok and not offensive to be pangender and fluidflux?? I feel like every gender but fluctuate to one more than the other. I feel like a demigirl but still resonate with pangender. I just want to know to not offend anybody.

That's totally fine, yeah-

Hi i'm asking for a friend
If anyone could help, they feel like it's both pangender and nonbinary? is there a gender other than pangender that would fit him? like specifically being all genders but focused on one?

K2-09X • 6/7/2021

Pangender is just fine for him, pangender people don't have to be equally connected to every single gender that they are. They can focus more on non-binary while being, at the same time, being agender, demi-boy, etc.

Ranboomybelovedunderscore • 6/7/2021

Ahh thank you for helping! I'll tell it that

Iamhellokitty • 6/11/2021

If they feel like just pangender doesn't fit, it could maybe be bigender between pangender and nonbinary? Or they could also always just use both non-binary and pangender for labels

OmnisexualGirl23 • 5/24/2021

Can pangenders feel more connected to a certain gender more than the others? also whats the difference between pangender and omnigender?

Chxractxr • 5/31/2021

For your second question, Pangender is all genders while omni is most genders. Omnigender`s genders can be used as parts of a whole gender while pangender is each gender simultanously. (Well, this is my understanding of the difference)

(Edited by Chxractxr)

FoxBanana • 6/23/2021

For your first question, yes, pangender people don't have to be equally connected to every gender that they are

Ath's questions • 4/29/2021

Is it possible to be a demigirl pangender? I'm questioning my gender for a really long time now, and, when I found it, demigirl seemed to fits me, it still does. But, at the same time that I always feel kinda feminine, I also fil as if I'm agender and male, what get's me really confused. So I kinda thought if I could be a demigirl pangender, because I always feel mostly feminine, but I also feel like some other genders are right. I'm not sure if this makes sense, but I hope that someone knows the answer for my question

OmnisexualGirl23 • 5/23/2021

Same

Teddygame • 6/2/2021

It's possible that you could be polygender
